

Dunkettle Progress Update

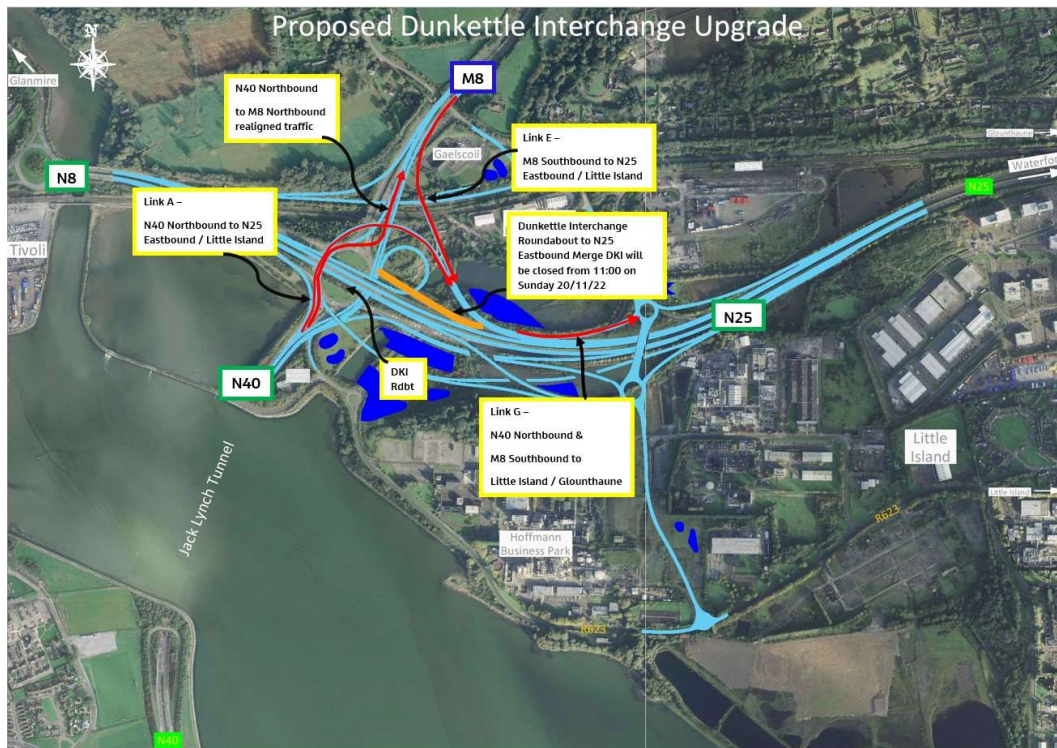

19th November 2022

Twitter

Website

- Works at Dunkettle will continue through the night tonight in order to ensure that the new links can open as planned at 11am tomorrow, Sunday 20th November. Local diversions will be in place during off peak hours to facilitate the final safety barrier, lining, lighting works etc.

- The photograph below shows the lining nearing completion at the merge area from Link A/E to the N25 Eastbound.
- We are confident that the new links will open on schedule and motorists are again requested the exercise particular care and attention over the coming days as the new layout becomes established.

Link A/E Merge with N25 Eastbound.

- The videos hereunder provide a useful overview of how Links A, E and G will look on opening

The video below shows the new route of Link A for traffic heading Northbound on the N40 through the Jack Lynch Tunnel wishing to access the N25 Eastbound or Little Island/Dunkettle local area.

The video below shows the new route of Link E for traffic heading Southbound on the M8 wishing to access the N25 Eastbound or Little Island/Dunkettle local area.
